FOREWORD

I take pleasure in presenting the Northern Ontario Directory 1982/83.

The Northern Ontario Directory provides information on communities and Indian Reserves located north of the French River, with a minimum population of twenty-five.

To avoid duplication, the directory excludes incorporated communities. Information on these can be found in Profiles of Ontario Municipalities and the Municipal Directory 1982*, published annually by the provincial Ministries of Industry and Tourism, and Intergovernmental Affairs, respectively.*

In the unincorporated communities section, reference is made to community clubs, community leaders, the Unorganized Communities Association of Northern Ontario, Local Services Boards and Local Roads Boards representatives. The second section, Indian Reserves, profiles reserves, as well as settlements awaiting reserve status.

This edition has been greatly revised using a new format. For the first time, it includes a glossary of the terms used throughout the directory, as well as a more comprehensive index and a user questionnaire. After using the Northern Ontario Directory 1982/83 for a period of three months or so, I hope that you will complete the questionnaire printed on the next few pages and return it to the Information Services Branch of the Ministry of Northern Affairs.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Northern Affairs Officers who provided the information contained in the directory, and the staff of the Information Services Branch of the Ministry of Northern Affairs who were responsible for its collating and editing.

To all of our directory users, whose comments and suggestions will aid the Ministry of Northern Affairs in its effort to maintain a quality directory that is a useful resource in meeting your needs, we express our gratitude.

LEO BERNIER
Minister of
Northern Affairs

GLOSSARY

An UNINCORPORATED COMMUNITY is a community without municipal organization.

An INDIAN RESERVE is defined as a section of land set aside for the use and benefit of a particular group of Indians or an Indian band under the provisions and terms of the Indian Act, the federal legislation governing Indian affairs. Each Indian reserve has a band council to direct the affairs of the community. The band executive, made up of a chief and a number of councillors can be elected or appointed by the band members.

A LOCAL SERVICES BOARD is a legally constituted, self-help body of three or five annually elected members, acting on behalf of the residents of an unincorporated community to ensure that basic services are provided for them on a continuing basis: water supply, fire protection, sewage disposal, garbage collection, street or area lighting and recreational programs or facilities. A local services board is financed by the community itself or through existing provincial government programs, in addition to the matching subsidy arrangement between the Ministry of Northern Affairs and a local services board. The residents of an unincorporated community must decide whether a local services board would be in their best interests.

A LOCAL ROADS BOARD is administered by the Ministry of Transportation and Communications, composed of three trustees elected annually. Each board is responsible for the construction and maintenance of public roads within its district. The Ministry of Transportation and Communications and the local roads board share the cost of this service. Formation of a local roads board is optional, the choice being left to individual communities.

The UNORGANIZED COMMUNITIES ASSOCIATION OF NORTHERN ONTARIO (UCANO) operates on behalf of the unicorporated communities which have opted for representation by the Association. Acting mainly as a liaison between the communities and the government, UCANO not only informs the member communities of decisions concerning them but also negotiates with the government for programs that will be of direct benefit to Northern Ontario.

ARMSTRONG

Armstrong came into existence in the early 1900s as a result of the railway expansion. Its primary importance then was as a divisional point for the Canadian National Railway and it has remained an important railway centre since. During World War II and in the late 1940s Armstrong also became a key military base until the military's departure in 1974.

AROLAND

Aroland was inhabited at the turn of the century but very loosely organized. With the railway expansion in the early 1900s and the establishment of the Arrow Land and Logging Company in 1933, Aroland became a more permanent community. This company closed its operations in the early 1940s and Kimberly-Clark began a major expansion program in the area during the late 1970s. Aroland has no legal status as a reserve or settlement but its residents hold individual memberships with the Long Lake Band #58, Long Lake Band #77, Fort Hope Band or Whitesand Band; the remaining 40 per cent are non-formal elections for chief and council, however, they have an Indian Association.

DAWSON TOWNSHIP

Meldrum Bay is the only settlement in the township and is named after a market town in Scotland. In 1876, the federal government constructed a lighthouse at Meldrum Bay. Commercial fishing was once the important industry and Meldrum Bay supported three fishing tugs. Today, tourism, hunting and fishing provide Dawson Township with plenty of summer activity.

DINORWIC

Dinorwic was founded in the late 1880s with the establishment of a Hudson's Bay Company post. The area became widely known for its fur trading because it was an access point to the Sioux Lookout area and also to the fur areas near Fort Frances. The Canadian Pacific Railway also established a station and watering stop for their locomotives in the community.

HERON BAY

Heron Bay arose during the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway mainline. Its continued development was due to the arrival of Ontario Paper Company Limited cutting operations. In 1970, however, the community underwent a substantial decrease in population as a result of the relocation of this firm to Manitouwadge.

LAPPE

Lappe was settled by Finnish immigrants in the early 1900s. The community was prosperous during the 1920s and 30s but was greatly affected by the depression. The young people tended to leave the community and farming died. Most of the land is now occupied by people who are retired or who commute to work in Thunder Bay.

MACLEOD TOWNSITE

The community came into existence in 1935 as a townsite for the employees of MacLeod Cockshutt Gold Mines Limited. In 1936, the townsite was almost completely burned. However, it was rebuilt immediately, and housed the mine employees until August 1970, when the mine closed. Today the homes are owned individually and the townsite remains a residential area outside of Geraldton.

MINAKI

Minaki, originally known as Winnipeg River Crossing, has a history dating to the Wolseley Expedition. In 1910, the Canadian National Railway built the Minaki Inn, now Minaki Lodge, as a tourist resort and tourism has been the mainstay since. Lumbering which was started in 1912 by the Crossing Lumber Company is also important in the area.

NOLALU

The first settlers arrived in the 1890s the same time as the opening of the Silver Mountain Mine. While some settlers worked for the mine, most took homesteads and cut logs for the local sawmills. The name Nolalu is derived from the first two letters of the North Land Lumber Company, one of the sawmills operating in the area at that time.

PEARSON

Land settlement grants were provided to Veterans who served in defense of Upper Canada during Athenian Rage. The deeds to land in Pearson (named after an Anglican Minister who had been in the Ministry for 50 years) were granted in approximately 1906 (though there is little evidence to support their actual settlement and use of these grants). The bulk of settlers came to Pearson from Norway, Finland, Scotland, England, Southern Ontario and the States around 1913. They were mainly involved in farming, carpentry and lumbering.

SCOBLE

Surrounded by organized municipalities, Scoble remains unorganized. It was primarily homesteaded by pioneers earning a living by gardening and cutting timber. In the early 1890's, prospecting for silver was very active. Rabbit, Beaver and Badger mines were in the area. However, no silver was actually found in Scoble. Many homesteaders continued to dig holes in the hills when they weren't logging.

SUNSHINE

Formerly a section stop on the Canadian Pacific Railway the community now centres along Highway #17 and encompasses an area along Highway #102 toward Kaministiquia. Fog often engulfs the valley from the hill east of Highways #17 and #102, westerly to the Sunshine Bridge. Sunshine derives its name as the location at which one emerges from the fog and sees the sun shine.

UPSALA

Upsala was originally developed for World War I veterans and was eventually sold to them for one dollar per lot in 1923. It was, at that time, a farming area which grew potatoes and won several awards for crops yielding over 500 bushels per acre. Some farming is still active in the area but the main industry is now logging.

SHEGUIANDAH RESERVE #24

Sheguiandah Reserve was founded around 1860 by a number of Indians who had accepted the faith of the Anglican church. The origin of the name is a little doubtful: one old Indian story tells of a Frenchman by the name of "Shequi" who had a trading post on an island somewhere in the bay. It became known as "Shequi's Home", "andah" meaning home. The reserve is approximately 5,100 acres in size.
